

COVID-19 Nonprofit Crisis Funding

04.13.20 | Linda J. Rosenthal, JD

The crisis facing our entire society has thrust the nonprofit sector into a dual role all too familiar from emergencies past: We are fighting for our survival while at the same time stepping up to provide needed benefits and services to our communities.

In these uncharted waters, nonprofit organizations are looking to sources of financial assistance both established (government contracts, foundation grants, and individual donors) as well as new (rapid-response funds and special government loans and benefits).

We've assembled, and will continue to add to, a list of various resources on available crisis funding.
